DEADENING WALLS AND CETLINGS,—Men of iogenuity, lend your ears. There is no greater noisance in modern bouses than that of the transmission of sound through the parti-walls. Any practical inexpeosive and efficient means of deadening sound will be a great boon. Solid walls and solid floore transmit sound in the highest degree. The Metropolitan building act provides that all parti-walls shall bosolid and of a certain thickness in preportion to beight and length. How is the evil to be overcome? "For eight years," writes a studious friead to us, "I have occupied a house in London; and during the whole of this time there have been neighbors having young families. They are musical, and, I must earlies, labor most industriously at the reales. Murning, noon, and night, one of the other of the children howls and straunts, apparently without toaking any progress." There is no objection to neighbors' children learning to sing—quite the reverse, but it is most objectionable that the walls should sa rapidly transmit sounds and render the ladies' efforts so whiley known. Some persons always take a corner house so as to be free from such nuisances or one side at least.

Is there no remedy? The late Mr. Cobbitt had some trouble at Balmoral with certain floors, and tremem-sered in taking dwm as ald palace floor, a great transpy spars before, wast quant i ies of exclessfells fellout from between the joints. These had been used in plu crin z. The idea was ne'ed upon. Cocles were deal'ed and, brought, cleaned and died, and used with a most benetic isl effect. The cellular spaces thus produced absorbed sound.

Protection of Brickwork.—The penetration of moisture through the surface of brickwork may be obviated by the following simple remedy:

Three-sourths of a pound of mottled scapis to be dissolved in one callon of water, and the hot solution spread steadily with a flat-brush over the outer surface of the brick work, taking care the unit idoes not lather; this is to be allowed to dry for eventy-forn hours, when a solution formed of on quarter of a pound of alum dissolved in two gallons of water is to be applied in a similar manner over the ceating of soap. The operation should be performed in dry, settled weather. The soap and slum mn unly decompose each other and form an insoluble varnish, which the rain is unable to peotrate, and this cause of dampness is said to be effectually removed. Another meth d was some those since described (as, by the way, the previous one was) at the Ruyal Institute of Architects, to ensists of sulphuizing oil as a varnish or paint, and is said to improve the volor of the brick or stone, as well as preserve them. It is prepared by subjectling eight parts of linseed oil and one part of sulphur to a temperature of 278 deg; in an irron vossel. It is said to keep out both air and moisture, and prevent depoits and sout and dirt, when applied with a brush to the surface of a building of brick or stone, or even of woodwork.
